Community Action Process

Make your vision of a healthy, active community a reality with the Community Action Process. Weave physical activity into your community’s very essence. Think about facilities, parks, programs, safe routes, and policies.

Saskatchewan in motion uses a 5 step process that seeks to uncover and use the strengths within communities as a means for sustainable behavior change. The process includes the following steps:

Step One: Develop a community profile
- The Saskatchewan in motion team with community leaders collect information and inventory resources to determine strengths, assets, and opportunities. The collection will be done through focus groups and surveys. The collected data will be analyzed and the profile will be completed by the Saskatchewan in motion team.

Step Two: Engage the community
- In partnership, the community and in motion will host a Moving Together Symposium to bring together community leaders and stakeholders (including youth). They will be inspired by an expert speaker, discuss the community profile, and take part in a facilitated workshop to identify priorities for action.

Step Three: Create a community action plan
- Once priorities for action have been identified a physical activity action plan for the community will be developed. The plan will be used by community leaders and stakeholders as a guide to increase opportunities for physical activity.

Step Four: Implement
- Once the plan is developed, implementation begins. During this phase, short term successes, storytelling and celebrations are encouraged to continue to build momentum toward longer term objectives.

Step Five: Evaluate and Report
- Information will be gathered throughout the process to measure and report on progress toward our shared goal, community objectives and key learnings along the way.
Throughout the process the Community Action Model will be used as a guide to collect, share and determine action. The model is a simple, clear focused approach to guide community action planning toward behavior change.

The model helps to:

- Identify a starting line for long term action planning
- Build momentum
- Validate existing work
- Celebrate early success toward long term action
- Identify solutions to challenges along the way

Saskatchewan in motion has worked through the process with a variety of communities. Each community is now implementing actions identified in their profile and at the Moving Together Symposium. Community leaders and stakeholders are working together and individually to do their part to ensuring children, youth and their families have safe, fun and convenient opportunities to be active!

Some examples of action:

- School Travel Planning and Active and Safe Routes to school initiatives
- Establishment of a communication network (ie. Community Registration Night)
- Connecting a walking trail between 2 communities to be used for active transportation
- Community programs
- Policy change

The Saskatchewan in motion project was a fantastic resource. It provided us with the tools to speak to more of the community than I would have hoped to hear from. From Focus Groups with students, teachers, seniors and the rest of the community to the electronic surveys we were able to get a great response from our residents. The Moving Together Symposium was the final piece of the puzzle to help us focus our attention on smaller goals that we can achieve very quickly and it gave us a direction on what the rest of the community wanted to see on a grander scale. The in motion partnership with the Town has been incredibly helpful and I would recommend this project to every community in Saskatchewan.
